

DONATION POLICY

The Athens State University Archives collects photographs and documents for the purpose of preserving them for use by the University and community. We support the program by reproducing copies of donated items on an individual basis and in publications. Donation of non-copyright items gives the Archives the right to publish and reproduce said items unless otherwise specified on this form. The Archives reserve the right to refuse any contribution if the item does not fit the collection policy of the Archives; or if the item is of questionable origin; or if restrictions on the item conflicts with the Archives Mission Statement. All items donated to, and accepted by, the Archives become property of the Archives and cannot be returned to the donor, their family, or heirs unless specific provisions are made at the time of donation.
